Faculty Fellows Program 2018-2019

Application deadline: May 15, 2018

The Center for Innovations in Teaching and Learning (CITL) at UCSC invites senate and non-senate faculty to apply to join our second cohort of Faculty Fellows.

Information about this year’s Fellows can be found at https://citl.ucsc.edu/programs/faculty-fellows.html

CITL Faculty Fellows constitute themselves as a community of peers engaging with higher education research, reflecting on their teaching, and supporting a culture of excellence in teaching and learning on campus.

Many engage in small-scale research projects related to topics such as:

- building and sustaining Faculty Learning Communities in their divisions and disciplines
- leading quarterly departmental pedagogy workshops for faculty and graduate students
- reviewing or revising discipline-based curricula
- supporting undergraduate or graduate research on teaching and learning at UCSC
- fostering excellence in mentoring (undergraduate, graduate, faculty) at UCSC

Fellows will be expected to attend approximately 3-4 meetings per quarter, including reading group/speaker discussions, as well as occasional special events. During the Fall quarter, Fellows will work together to identify a theme for our activities in Winter and Spring of 2019.

Fellows are eligible to receive a research fellowship of $2,000 per year. These research funds may be used to support any research project that enhances the culture and practice of teaching and learning at UCSC. We also welcome applications from faculty members who do not intend to undertake a research project, and who would serve as Fellows without grant funds.
